Murder on Cue by Robin Jennifer Miller

Maple Lodge is no ordinary retirement home - it's a haven for aging actors, where egos linger and gossip spreads faster than stage whispers. When a heavy snowfall cuts the home off from the outside world, tensions rise and tempers flare. No one can leave - not even Gareth, the solicitor who's come to update the will of his sharp-tongued cousin, Sybil.

But there's more than bad weather brewing. The home faces the threat of closure, and several residents have received nasty anonymous letters. With nothing else to do, the group gathers for an evening of revelation - reading the letters aloud, unearthing old secrets, and discovering a mysterious photograph of a young man no one seems to recognise.

By morning, the snow hasn't stopped - and neither has the drama. As the residents wonder how to fill another long day, a body is found... then another. Before the thaw sets in, the shocking truth is revealed.

Set over two Acts with a 15 minute interval, this darkly comic whodunnit is packed with intrigue, laughter, and more than a touch of theatrical flair.
